EDITORIAL NOTES

Along with the announcement that Secretary of State Hughes is to retire from the cabinet of President Coolidge on March 4, came on Saturday the further information that he would be succeeded in that position by George Harvey. It cannot be said that the suggestion has anywhere awakened great enthusiasm. The ability of Mr. Harvey is unquestioned, but there are qualifications which the head of the department of state should have which in the suggested successor to Mr. Hughes seem to be lacking, and among them are good judgment, fair-mindedness and a lack of personal bias. In whatever positions Mr. Harvey has been, he seems to have "spiced" the news.

Since the above announcement was made, other correspondents at Washington have been at the work of cabinet building and their lists contain the names of Hughes, Mellon, Hoover and Stone among those who are to remain when President Coolidge, having completed the term of his predecessor, practically with the latter's cabinet, will start his own administration. It is a good suggestion that the four above named should be retained, and if the others remain until March 4, it would seem that courtesy to the previous administration had been stretched far enough.

As a general proposition, it may be said that there is more honor than profit in the holding of a cabinet office. A man fitted to any one of these places has such personal qualifications, either business or professional, as would enable him to command a large annual income. To enter the cabinet is to relinquish this certainty for a smaller stipend, and it is a genuine sacrifice when a man of moderate means and with a family, which he would be bound to support, consents to give four or more years out of the best period of his life for this public service. That many have consented to do so is greatly to their credit; but there may readily come a time when a man cannot square his public service with his personal obligations. Perhaps in this time of large salaries, fees and business profits, it may some time occur to the government that it can afford to do better for its needs of departments, whose responsibilities are superior to those of the biggest of corporations.

Monthly Hospital Report.

A total of 79 patients were admitted to the Aurelia Osburn-Fox Memorial hospital in this city, during the month of October, according to a report made by Genevieve N. Lechevet, superintendent. A total of 887 days service was given in behalf of these patients. Six babies also were born during the month in the hospital.

Mrs. Lechevet also declared in her report that the hospital was generously patronized during the month, with many gifts of flowers, canned fruits, vegetables and magazines, by friends of the institution.

The annual Thanksgiving donation to the hospital will be held November 24. Mrs. Lechevet said that further plans for this event would be announced later.

HIDDEN POTENTIALITIES

Thou art Simon • thou shalt be called Cephas (I. e. rock). — John 1:42.

One of the characteristics of Jesus' teaching with men was that he always saw not only what they were at any given time, but what they might become.

He looked on Simon, the uncouth fisherman, and saw him in the rugged confessor on whose faith the church should rise.

We hear a great deal nowadays about character reading; the ability to "size up" a man swiftly and accurately.

Alas, too often it is a study devoted to the discovery of a man's weakness so that we may implant in him certain ideas regardless of their real value to him—and endeavor to convert what he is, not for his, but for our benefit.

Some men become quite expert in this business of analyzing their fellow-men for their own profit.

Too few of us look carefully for a man's possibilities and devote ourselves to their development. Yet that is one of the greatest joys as well as one of the most useful services that can be performed.

It is the joy of parents in their children, of teachers in their pupils, of athletes in their teams, of true partners in their business.

If we are going to be honest disciples of Christ, we must look on men not as objects to be exploited, but as possibilities to be developed.

Every one has something in him worthy to be glorified and fostered.

To recognize a ••••• in the rough and bring forth a polished jewel is the greatest of human labors.

AFTER THE ELECTION

Clear-headed, clear-minded. Cool, clear-headed, clear-minded—that tells the whole story. That and an Americanism founded upon the constitution that refused to yield so much as the fraction of an inch to agitators. Against such a character the mad mobs of a Davis and the mad mouthings and broodings of a LaFollette were hurled in vain. They fell harmlessly. Calvin Coolidge was accepted as the foe of corruption. He was accepted as a leader that would fearlessly do his duty; as his conscience—but the politician—dictated—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Third Party Split.

In its zeal to commit murder, the Third party really committed suicide. Like that one of the Medford family who, in his furious stroke at an enemy, stabbed himself. Senator LaFollette has hurt himself more than the Democratic party with the danger that he spoke before he was one of the great gains of Tuesday's election. It largely removed the peril that the group system in congress would drive out the two-party system.—New York Times.

A Lesson.

Just see what happened. We had a perfectly good candidate, and perfectly good issues, and we hoped the women would vote for the handsomest man who has run for the presidency for a great many years. And we have been taken in on every side. The women are indifferent to manly beauty, and instead of carrying the whole northwest, it looks more as if LaFollette would have to be carried to a sanitarium. Politically, he is worth 30 cents, outside of his own ballcock.—Philadelphia Record.

The Surprising Blunder.

After the agony inflicted upon the Democratic party by Mr. McCauley's selfish pronouncement of the deadlock the supreme blunder was the nomination of Governor Bryan. The nomination of Mr. Davis, in addition to his own personal qualifications for President, was the only candidate who could have united the Democratic south and the Democratic east.—New York Times.

An Astute Politician.

Senator LaFollette, despite the failure of his third-party venture, is an astute politician—within certain lines. He must realize now that there is no demand for him as a national leader. He is not likely to persist with a third-party movement when his position as political boss of Wisconsin may be the penalty for his rashness. The closeness of the issue in his home state must have somewhat unnerved him.—Buffalo News.

Comparative Votes.

Comparison of LaFollette's vote with that of Roosevelt in 1912 would be more impressive if consideration did not have to be given to the fact that the number of voters because of women suffrage especially, is very much larger now than then. Roosevelt carried six states; LaFollette one. However, he was "runner-up" in 11 others.

Trapping Season Opens.

As trapping season is now open, the conservation law permits the taking of certain fur-bearing animals. It opens today. It will be legal to take mink and sable or marten in any manner from November 10 to March 15; raccoons and skunks from November 10 to February 10. It is unlawful to dig or smoke skunks out of their holes, and they must not be hunted or killed by dogs. The open season for muskrats is from December 1 to March 31, except that in several Adirondack counties it continues until April 20 inclusive.

Fur-bearing animals can not be legally taken by the use of chemicals, gas or other poisonous substances.

A DOOR TO THE SHUT IN.

One of the difficulties connected with the care of folks that are run down in health is about to be solved. As you know the rays of the sun are worth much to you in health, and you can readily see their more urgent need when you are not well.

In treating cases of tuberculosis or like conditions, physicians use every means at their disposal. The fresh air, good food, and later, light exercise, and treatment is to have the patient right out in the sun.

Now it isn't always possible to have the patient outdoors, because the weather may be too cold.

To offset this in former days, large "sun parlors" were established, solariums as they were called.

However, it was soon learned that the patients did not do as well in the solarium as outdoors, notwithstanding that perfect ventilation was established.

What was the matter?

Why despite the fact that the glass in the windows and roof permitted wonderful sun heat, it actually prevented certain rays of the sun from penetrating the room to the patient.

These beneficial rays penetrate the body for a number of inches, if they are not obstructed in any way.

And so science has evolved a scheme to remedy the defect of the glass in use at present.

A research engineer, remembering that quartz or rock crystal will transmit these healing rays, has been able to fuse this rock at the General Electric Research Laboratory, that glass that will allow these rays to pass through it, has been manufactured.

This will be a wonderful boon to every institution where the sun light is so essential to a cure.

And right here, don't you think it is a lesson to the rest of us, that there is no reason to spend so much of our time indoors. At home or away, even a few minutes daily in the sun, would be worth a lot to our general health.

At lunch hour, a few minutes walk before eating, a few minutes rest after eating, and another few minutes in the sun's rays might mean just the difference between health and disease.

Section No. 17—To A Wild Rose, by Edward Alexander MacDowell, (Born 1861 in New York; died 1908 in New York)

Beauty in Simplicity.

MacDowell is the fourth American composer represented in our list. By many critics he is judged to be foremost of American writers of music.

To A Wild Rose is one of the simplest of his compositions. While its lack of technical difficulties makes it possible for little children to play the notes, the sincerity and depth of emotion expressed in lovely tones makes it appear frequently on the programs of the great master pianists.

Our Best Composer.

Edward MacDowell died in the prime of his life, but owing to mental troubles he produced no music in his last few years. He was a brilliant pianist but his reputation rests upon a considerable number of beautiful compositions, most of which are distinctly American in spirit. No one has packed more beauty and significance into short piano pieces than has MacDowell.

Suggesting Romance or Mood.

He is called a romantic composer because of the mood of his music. This little composition, in other words, does not pretend to be like a wild rose but rather to suggest the mood and atmosphere which one gives a wild rose when going into the woods or along a path he comes suddenly upon a daisy, fragrant flower.

A Developed Indian Theme.

Perhaps because in writing his Woodland Sketches of which this is the first, MacDowell's thought constantly reverted to the original inhabitants of these American woods, his mind was filled with the remembrance of their melodies. It is quite sure at least that the short, rather discursive theme of this composition is taken directly from a melody of the Brecknock Indians.

It is believed in poetical suggestions and in giving imaginative titles. He aims always, however, more to call up the mood or feeling awakened by an event or an object than he does

WAR'S TASK UNFINISHED

Dr. Flynn in Armistice Day Sermon in First Methodist Church Pleads for Completion of Work for Which Heroes Gave Lives Overseas.

"War is a foolish thing. It accomplishes nothing, settles nothing. The greatest task confronting all the peoples of this earth is a plan to outlaw war."

Such was the comment made last night by Dr. John William Flynn, in the First Methodist church, in an armistice day sermon entitled, "Life's Unfinished Task."

"Six years ago next Tuesday the armistice was signed," said Dr. Flynn. "What a day it was. All parts of the world, every people, knew the strife was ended. That day brought gladness to all of mankind."

"I know that the main task was to win. But what was back of it? Why were we in it?"

"President Wilson said it was a war to end war. I heard some of the comments in the United States senate on the President's statement. I remember especially one senator, Reed of Missouri, ridiculed what President Wilson said. Senator Reed is a terrible man in the art of sarcasm—he is the most sarcastic in an artistic way of any man in this country."

When Ambassador Harvey, while delivering a speech, refuted President Wilson's thought with the statement that "America entered the war to save her own skin."

"Who was right? I should say that Mr. Harvey was not right."

"The 80,000 of our boys who died from wounds and disease did all they could. They can do no more. But they have left us the unfinished task. If there is nothing in war besides the killing of men then their lives are wasted unless we, ourselves, finish the task they began."

"When the war broke out, every one thought it would be over in at least three months. No one thought that people of the present day—with such education, such refinement, such culture would fight in the manner they did for four years. But all of present-day civilization, culture and refinement and education went by the boards. More than 26,000,000 died, half of whom were soldiers. More than $215,000,000 in money was spent—$215,000,000 a day. Premier Nitti said that all this loss was small in comparison with the undermining of morals and the standards of culture of civilization. Yet despite all this, last Christmas, more soldiers were under arms throughout the world than there was before the war broke out. And even today, scientists throughout the world are working in laboratories upon devices that would shut out the lives of a whole city."

"We have been foolish. Let us stop our sin. We should quit glorifying war. The time has come when the man in a uniform should not be looked upon as a hero any longer as that uniform covers a man who is a good citizen in the cause of peace. The country must have a self-respecting citizenry whether it has an army or not.

"Let us exalt those who are the foundation of peace. Let us honor those men who served in France—some went through hell. But let us remember that there are men who also are going through hell to live a Christian life—fighting alone without hands, acclaim, applause in order that they may be men. No one comes by goodness naturally, only by faith in God. Let us also honor these men."

BIGGEST AND BEST NIGHT

This Evening of Course, at The Annual Armistice Ball of Oneonta Post, American Legion, with Jan Garber and Orchestra.

The biggest and best dance of the season will be held this evening at the Armory when Jan Garber and his Victor orchestra will provide music, from 8 until 1:30 o'clock, for the annual Armistice ball of Oneonta Post, American Legion. For not only has the best dance orchestra available been secured, but the Armory drill hall has been completely transformed by the decorating committee, into a dream of beauty. The Legion dances have for several seasons been known as the "Biggest and Best Dances" and indications point to a big crowd for this evening.

Tickets are on sale at the Acorn Hardware store, the Wilbur National bank, A. J. Pedroni, City Drug store, and other places. There is a very few boxes, which are always so convenient, which may be secured upon early application at the Carr Clothing Company.

American Legion dances in Oneonta have earned a reputation which covers a radius of many miles, and has reached even further, for bringing to a city of this size, the Melodians, and Vincent Lopez. Members of the Post in charge of the affair of this evening feel sure that there will be a big throng of dance lovers from throughout this section of the state and promise that even the highest expectations of their patrons will be exceeded.

LEGION MEMORIAL SERVICE

CHURCH OF AMERICAN LEGION MEMORIAL SERVICE. ST. MARY'S MALL LAST EVENING.

Rev. Father Edmund Reilly of Worcester delivered Memorial Address to Oneonta Veterans of World War—Site at Elm and Union Lane of God and of Neighbor as Sons of Religion—Have Individuals to Serve Nation.

"Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friends," was the theme of the memorial address delivered last evening at St. Mary's hall before a large assembly of members of the American Legion and their friends by the Rev. Father Edmund Reilly of Worcester and Schenectady. Rev. Father John Murphy, assistant pastor of St. Mary's church, presided and several musical selections were sung under the leadership of Frank Walsh.

Rev. Father Reilly in his talk attacked the Ku Klux Klan and urged that the love of God above all and the love of neighbor as the Christian religion. He also pointed out that he could never take the place of individual virtue, and called for a cure for "lawitis."

Rev. Father Murphy opened the meeting with an invocation, and after the singing of America introduced Rev. Father Reilly as a chaplain of the World war, one who served for two years, more than a year and a half of which was spent in France, one who could tell of the war from his personal experience.

In opening Rev. Father Reilly extended his sympathy, as well as that on behalf of his audience, to relatives and friends of the soldiers and sailors who lost their lives in the service of the country or those who have since died as a result of injuries which they there sustained. Father Reilly said that Armistice day might be considered the Memorial day of the World war, a day on which we might pay our respect to the memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice.

In developing his text, "Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friends," the speaker took three scenes, August of 1918 in Fimes, Vesle, and other branches; Armistice day of 1918; and Decoration day of 1919. He gave personal reminiscences of all these and made a very interesting background for his talk.

A brief summary of some of the most interesting parts of the remainder of the talk of Rev. Father Reilly follows:

War, One of Greed. "Some may ask, why this additional memorial day? To them I would answer greed, that nations professing to be Christian threw all Christian ideals to the wind and fell in with a scheme of greed."

"In view of some of the latest developments in the history of the war I feel inclined to state that the Germans were no worse than the rest of us, that at the worst they were loyal to misguided leaders. Ten years may change all of our ideas of the cause of the war."

"Some bloodthirsty stay-at-homes of our nation, comfortable in their feather beds, have said that we did not go far enough in our campaign against the big business of those of us who were there felt that we had gone far enough."

"The French people are highly appreciative of the service rendered them by American troops and they are caring for the graves of our dead in their country, some spending three months in making wreaths for the graves for decoration day that they may receive the same honors as in our own country."

Hits at the Ku Klux Klan.

"Would countries rush into war if they stopped to think of the loss of men, even of material? We find that the two principles of religion are love of God above all things and love of neighbor as thyself. That we do not find in the Klan, in any of its principles I have found."

"Lawitis is the disease which now has our country in its grip. In the words of our President recently expressed, 'Law is no substitute for virtue.'"

"Christ never spent any time in Caesar's ante-chamber. At a recent reunion of my regiment we had been given a private park for our use and it was no dry place. In fact I might almost say that it was a lake. The Eighteenth amendment was there openly broken by men who had risked their lives to save this nation."

"I make the plea 'save the individual and the nation is safe.'"

This is Father and Son Week

Efforts Being Made to Bridge the Chasm Between Father and Son and Make Them Chums—Mass Meeting on Friday Evening at First Methodist Church.

(Contributed by Secretary Lange.)

Many fathers are so busy making a living they are failing to make a life for themselves or for their boys. The boy problems are being overshadowed by the serious problems of keeping alive the ideals of the American home. Institutions are relieving the home from much responsibility that God intended only for the parent where the family gather, after the day's work. The open fire has been supplanted by steam radiators. The morning meal which was a time for prayer is now in relay. The noon meal is usually eaten by mother, alone. The only meal when most of the family meet is at evening time, and often this meal is eaten with a rush in order to meet some evening engagements, or else father's nerves are in such a condition that all are glad when the meal is over and each seeks his own circle of friends. Is it strange that many fathers do not know their own boys, or boys their fathers under such conditions? The friend outside the home is many times better acquainted with the boy than those responsible for his entrance into the world.

To bridge this widening chasm between father and son, and especially at the time when the boy most needs his father—during the teen period—we are celebrating Father and Son week, emphasizing that the father and son should get together.

To help the father and son get together a mass meeting is to be held at the First Methodist Episcopal church on Friday night at 7:45 o'clock. At this meeting we will have the Rev. J. Woodman Habbitt of Calvary Presbyterian church of Newburgh, who will give an entertainment and talk. Mr. Habbitt is the same style of entertainer as Jean Page, who entertained the combined Rotarian and Kiwanian meeting last Wednesday night. With this entertainment Mr. Habbitt will give a talk on "What God Hath Joined Together." Mr. Habbitt is also one of the foremost interpreters of the English classics. All who heard Mr. Habbitt at the H-Y banquet at the Y. M. C. A. will surely welcome the opportunity to hear him again.

During this week and all through the years may this prayer come into our minds:

Last night my little boy confessed to me some childish wrong; And kneeling at my knee he prayed with tears: "Dear God, make me a man, like daddy—wise and strong; I know you can."

Then when he slept I knelt beside his bed, Confessed my sins, And prayed with low-bowed head, "O God, make me a child like my child here— Pure, guileless, Trusting Thee with faith sincere!"

—The Two Prayers by Rev. Andrew Gillies.

$2,500 IN CLOTHING STOLEN

Burglars Loot Richmond Clothing Store in Sidney Saturday Morning and Carry off Clothing in Automobile—Authorities Hunt Car With License No. 645-11.

Sidney, Nov. 9.—Clothing consisting of men's and boys' overcoats and suits, and valued at more than $2,500 was stolen sometime during the early morning hours yesterday by burglars, who broke into the store of Sherman Richmond on Main street here. The thieves gained entrance to the store by forcing a back window. An automobile was used to escape with the plunder. Sidney police and state troopers now are hunting a Hudson touring car with license No. 645-11, claimed to have been used by the robbers.

The burglary was discovered by Ethelbert Hazard who was passing the entrance of an alleyway leading back of the store. Mr. Hazard saw two men with their arms full of clothing which they were putting in a large automobile. Mr. Hazard hurriedly called his grandfather, Edward Casey of Wilton street, a constable and then the two immediately notified Chief of Police W. R. Dickinson. The party then hurried to the Richmond store but when they arrived, no trace of the burglars or their automobile could be found. The state troopers under Captain D. E. Fox also were called and the combined law enforcement agencies of the city of Sidney and the state now are working on the case.

Investigation disclosed that the robbers had gained entrance to the store by forcing open a window in the rear. It also has been ascertained that the number of the car used by them in carrying away the loot, is 645-11 and the best information concerning the machine that the police have been able to secure is that it is a seven-passenger Hudson touring car.

Clues now being run down indicate that the burglary was the work of two men, assisted by a younger man or a boy. After forcing entrance the two men carried the clothing from the place and piled it in the waiting machine. It is believed that the boy was stationed as lookout to give warning if anyone approached.

Reports from the headquarters of the state troopers here tonight indicated that the police have unearthed clues which may result in arrests soon and the recovery of the stolen property.

After carefully checking up the contents of his store, Mr. Richmond declared that property taken was worth at least $2,500 and consisted chiefly of men's and boys' overcoats and suits. He declared he had no burglar insurance and that the property would be a complete loss to him unless it is recovered.

BOY HIT BY AUTO

Bruce Field, Seven, of Hartwick, Suffered Bruises and Shock When He Jumps from Load of Hay in Front of Car.

Hartwick, Nov. 9. — Bruce Field, seven years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Field of North street, Hartwick, had a narrow escape from serious injury or death a few days ago, when he jumped from a load of hay on which he was riding and was struck by an automobile driven by Gerald Hughes, also of this place.

It is said that the boy was riding on the rear of the load of hay when the driver of the automobile, following the load of hay in his automobile and it is believed that the boy became confused in attempting to get out of the way of Dr. House's machine and ran from behind the wagon in front of the machine driven by Mr. Hughes, which was approaching from the opposite direction.

The boy was hurried to his home where Dr. Harry L. Crutenden, of Cooperstown, was called. Dr. George Schockcraft, the family physician, also was called. The two physicians found that young Field had suffered painful bruises and lacerations and what at first had been believed to be a serious injury was determined to be more of a nervous shock. He is reported to be recovering.

Try This at 86

Old in years doesn't mean old in body to D. Edson Smith of Berkeley, Calif. He's 86 now, but every day he goes through exercises—such as wrapping his left foot around his neck and touching the floor simultaneously with his head and feet. He expects to live to be more than a hundred.

CHRIST WOULD GIVE PEACE

"World Faces Choice Between God of War and God of Peace and We Must Choose," Says Dr. Russell.

Rev. Dr. J. C. Russell of the First Presbyterian church spoke upon "Peace" at the Armistice Sunday service at his church yesterday morning, taking his text from John 14:15: "My peace I leave with you." Briefly summarized Dr. Russell said:

"Everybody leaves something to his children, or to mankind. Some leave money, and it often does much good. It builds homes or hospitals or schools. Some leave nothing but money, and they were poor indeed. Some leave a heritage—a noble character, or great principle to guide humanity. Moses left us the moral law, which has been of incalculable value to the ages. David left us a heritage of songs, which has inspired others for thousands of years."

"Think what Jesus left to a waiting world, the sermon on the Mount, the love, the joy deep and abiding, a great and glorious peace. Some in every age refuse their legacy. They do not understand their significance, or appreciate their significance. Even when we receive them we fall often times to know their value until we lose them—and if then, in the providence of God, we regain them we glorify them."

"Think of the Armistice Day six years ago, when the people laughed and cried and danced and sang the day away—and no wonder, after what we went through, the agony of a World War, the cost in money, the loss of life, the devastation of land, the destruction of property, and worst of all the deterioration of character, the brutalizing effect of war."

"But the next world war about which people are already talking and planning, that the last one will seem like a child's play. Read Will Irvine on the next war and ponder it well, for the armistice day after that war will not be as joyous as the other one was. The results will be so appalling that the nations will be dumb with the terrible experience and civilization will hang in the balance. So there must be a way to prevent such a catastrophe."

"Now whence do wars arise? From jealousy and greed and hatred. There must be a radical change in humanity, a conversion. We must use the same amount of brain to preserve peace that we use to prepare for war, and we must begin with the children. We must cease to glorify war. We must show its real face, its brutality. Its unspeakable horror. Then we must start a new propaganda to train them into the will of peace. We must outlaw war, and hurl it down as a wild beast and drive it from civilization. Otherwise we will go down and our children with us, to utter destruction."

"I am no alarmist and this is not imaginary. It is a serious question whether civilization can survive another world war. While then we cherish as a sacred memory the boys who fought to help save the world, let us strive with all the power God has given us to prevent another and infinitely greater holocaust."

"Once the devil took Jesus up on a very high mountain and showed Him all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, and said all these will I give Thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me. But he refused to take the devil's way to call might right and evil good, he refused and chose rather the way of the cross, the way of righteousness and justice and truth."

"Now, after the ages, Jesus himself is calling us all up into a very high mountain and is showing to us all the kingdoms of the world and the sorrow and the shame of them, the hatred and greed and selfishness, and it says to us, 'I will change to you this sorrow into joy, this hate to love, and bring among the nations of the world a glorious brotherhood. If you will fall down and worship me.' We have bowed down to everything else, we have Christened war. We have our choice, Mars or Christ, the God of War or the Prince of Peace. Which shall we choose?"

MRS. E. J. THAYER DEAD.
Eminent Resident of Laurens Succumbs After Illness.

Laurens, Nov. 9.—Nannie Elizabeth Mann, wife of Edward L. Thayer, died at the family home in this village Saturday noon after an illness of ten weeks with a complication of diseases. Funeral services will be held from the home Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with Rev. N. B. Graves of the Methodist church of this village officiating. Burial will be made in Laurens cemetery.

The deceased was born at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, May 27, 1859, one of ten children of Willis and Martha Littlepage Mann. She came to her home there until her marriage to Edward L. Thayer of Milford, October 11, 1882, after which they came to Milford, residing on their farm there until November of 1918, when they retired from active work and moved to this village to be near their only child, Mrs. Harvey M. Biber.

Mrs. Mann was a woman of sterling qualities of mind and character, devoted to her home life, but ever ready to help others. At an early age she united with the Methodist church at White Sulphur Springs and was a regular attendant there until the infirmities of age made it impossible.

She leaves, also, besides the husband and daughter mentioned, three sisters, Mrs. Frances Carr of Rockport, Va.; Mrs. Jennie Rose of Radford, Va.; and Mrs. L. L. Punderson of Burton, Ohio.

The family will have the sympathy of many friends in their loss.

RENA OSTRANDER BACKUS

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Ostrander of Albany, Well Known in Oneonta, Meets Tragic End.

Oneonta relatives and friends of Rena Ostrander Backus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Ostrander of Albany, wife of Dr. Merle Backus of Smithport, Pa., are deeply shocked to learn of her tragic death which occurred at that place on Friday last. Mr. and Mrs. Ostrander passed through Oneonta on the sleeper on Saturday morning enroute to Smithport, but no intelligence has been received from them since they arrived there as to the circumstances and nothing is known except that a press dispatch states that she was shot and killed at her home there. Her identity as the person who fired the shot. News from some of the family is expected to reach here today which will clear up the sad tragedy.

Mrs. Backus was 34 years of age at the time of her death. It is believed that she was born here, her parents before removing to Albany, when some of the D. & H. shop forces were transferred to the Colonie plant.

She graduated from the Oneonta High school and later from the Albany Business college. Afterwards she was employed in the office of Seybold & Seybold. Some 11 years ago she was united in marriage with Mr. Backus, who is a member of an old and well known family, prominent in Smithport and in that part of the state.

Surviving her are the husband, her parents named above, one sister, Miss Helen Ostrander, who has a desirable position at the University of Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh, Pa., and one brother, Roger Ostrander of Albany. She leaves no children.

Mrs. Backus is well remembered in Oneonta as an attractive and lovable young woman and her circle of friends here is large. Deepest sympathy will

THIS IS CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK

This annual event is being observed throughout the United States by bookstores, libraries and various other organizations.

Its purpose is to emphasize good books for our young folks. Here at our store we are making a special display of the new and old favorites that children love and we cordially invite all to feel free to come in and look them over.

Our illustrated "Bookshelf for Boys and Girls" tells about them and a copy is yours for the asking at

REYNOLDS BOOKSTORE

Corner Main and Chestnut

A 2-Tube Radiola

Radiola III

Uses only inexpensive dry batteries. Loudspeaker and 2-stage amplifier can be added.

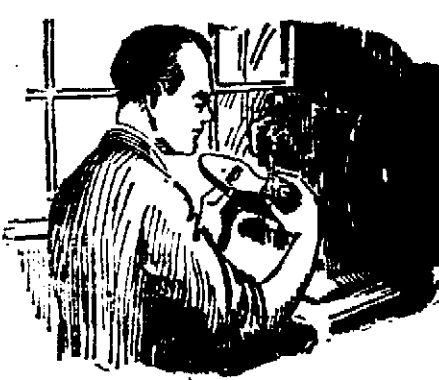

New-improved-sensitive-selective! A great performer. At a price that huge-quantity production makes possible. It will pick up distant stations on the headphones. Or operate a loud-speaker on near stations. Includes headphones and two Radiolans WD-1L.
